

MUSC 6500, Self-Assessment

Jeffrey Allardyce

1. What are you looking forward to this semester? What aspect(s) of music theory do you enjoy?
2. What are you worried about this semester? What aspect(s) of music theory is challenging for you?
3. In previous iterations of theory and aural skills classes (or classes in general), what has not served you? This can include in-class activities, assignments, means/modes of teaching, etc.
4. This course will be very hands-on, as it is a skills-based course. Beyond this mode of teaching and learning, how do you find you learn best?
5. What do you hope to gain from this course?
6. Throughout the semester, you will likely have some weeks that are more challenging than others. If this happens and they begin to snowball together, how can I help you work through these times and get back on track?
7. Please share your “muddiest point” from the syllabus. We will discuss this next class period. If there are multiple aspects that confuse you, please share them as you see fit.
